Are you an artist looking to get your work in front of a wider audience? Entering art shows is a great way to do just that. But how do you find the right shows for your work, and how do you increase your chances of winning?

This article will give you all the information you need to know about finding, entering, and winning art shows. We'll cover everything from researching shows to preparing your work to submitting your entries.

How to Find Art Shows

The first step is to find art shows that are a good fit for your work. There are a few different ways to do this:

- Online directories: There are a number of online directories that list art shows around the world. Some of the most popular directories include:
 - Call for Entry
 - Art Fair Calendar
 - Artist Network
- Local art centers: Many local art centers host or promote art shows. Contact your local art center to see if they have any upcoming shows.
- Social Media: Many art shows are promoted on social media. Follow your favorite artists and art organizations to learn about upcoming shows.

Once you've found a few shows that you're interested in, it's important to do your research. Read the prospectus for each show carefully to make sure that your work is a good fit. Consider the following factors:

- The theme of the show: Make sure that your work is relevant to the theme of the show. If the show is focused on a particular medium or style, make sure that your work fits into that category.
- The size and scope of the show: Some shows are small and intimate, while others are large and prestigious. Choose a show that is the right size for your work.
- The entry fee: Entry fees for art shows can vary significantly. Make sure that you can afford the entry fee before you submit your work.

- The deadline for submissions: Make sure that you have enough time to prepare your work and submit your entries by the deadline.

How to Enter Art Shows

Once you've found the right art shows, it's time to start preparing your entries.

The first step is to create a strong portfolio of your work. Your portfolio should include a variety of pieces that showcase your skills and abilities. Make sure that your portfolio is well-organized and easy to navigate.

Next, you need to write a compelling artist statement. Your artist statement should explain your artistic process and why you create art. It should also give the viewer a sense of your personality and your unique perspective on the world.

Once you have your portfolio and artist statement ready, you can start submitting your entries to art shows. Most art shows require you to submit your work online. The online submission process typically includes the following steps:

- Creating an account: You will need to create an account on the art show's website.
- Uploading your images: You will need to upload high-resolution images of your work.
- Filling out the entry form: You will need to provide information about your work, such as the title, medium, and dimensions.

- Paying the entry fee: You will need to pay the entry fee using a credit card or PayPal.

Once you have submitted your entries, you will need to wait for the jury to make their decisions. The jury will typically review all of the entries and select a small number of pieces to be included in the show.

How to Win Art Shows

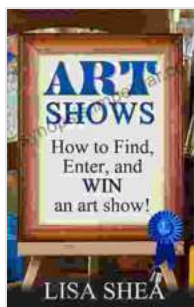

Winning an art show is a great way to get your work noticed and to earn some money. But what does it take to win an art show?

There are a few things that you can do to increase your chances of winning:

- Create high-quality work: The most important thing is to create high-quality work that is well-executed and visually appealing.
- Follow the instructions: Make sure that you follow the instructions for the show carefully. This includes submitting your work on time and in the correct format.
- Make a good impression: If you are invited to participate in an in-person show, make sure to make a good impression on the jury and the other artists
- Be patient: Winning an art show takes time and effort. Don't get discouraged if you don't win at first. Keep submitting your work and eventually you will be successful.

Entering art shows is a great way to get your work in front of a wider audience and to win some money. By following the tips in this article, you can increase your chances of success.
