The book begins by examining the historical roots of Iranian nationalism, tracing its origins back to the Achaemenid Empire (559-330 BCE). It then discusses the role of Islam in shaping Iranian identity and the ways in which the Iranian Revolution of 1979 has transformed the relationship between ethnicity and nationalism.

The book also provides a detailed analysis of the different ethnic groups that make up Iran, including the Persians, Azeris, Kurds, Arabs, and Baluchis. It examines the ways in which these groups have interacted with each other and with the Iranian state and discusses the challenges that they have faced in maintaining their cultural and linguistic identities.

Finally, the book explores the ways in which ethnicity has been used to both promote and challenge nationalist ideologies in Iran. It examines the role of the Iranian state in promoting a Persian-centric nationalism and discusses the ways in which ethnic minorities have resisted this narrative.

This book is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the history, culture, and politics of Iran. It provides a comprehensive and nuanced analysis of the complex relationship between ethnicity, identity, and nationalism in this important region.
