Empowering Critical Consciousness

Central to Freire's pedagogy is the concept of critical consciousness. He believed that education should not merely impart knowledge but also foster the ability to critically examine the world and challenge oppressive structures. Through dialogue, reflection, and praxis, learners are empowered to recognize and understand their own oppression and to take action to transform it.

Liberating Education: A Catalyst for Social Change

Freire envisioned education as a transformative force that could liberate individuals from the shackles of oppression. He advocated for a horizontal and dialogical approach to learning, where learners and educators engage in a mutual exchange of knowledge and experiences.
