

What Science Really Knows About the Greatest Debates of Early Childhood

Parenting is full of tough decisions. From the moment your child is born, you're faced with a barrage of choices, from how to feed them to how to discipline them. And as your child grows, the decisions only get more complex.

One of the best ways to make informed decisions about your child's development is to stay up-to-date on the latest scientific research. But with so much information out there, it can be hard to know what's fact and what's fiction.
